Necessary school computers are too expensive.

Students already spend enough money coming to college, they shouldn't have to spend even more on necessities like computers. There should be alternative choices of computers with lower storage or less features that aren't necessary for every day students. Most kids are forced to get really nice computers for school so it will last them throughout the year, instead of being able to just get the bare minimum for writing or simple research. I believe there should be websites for people who want computers for specific purposes, like for students who want to do no more than just write, make simple searches, and do their homework. My goal is to make a type of search engine that will allow people to easily find these computers.
